

Resurrecting the Cities of Vesuvius with sources and evidence Online

Presented by Sabreena Taylor

Resurrect Pompeii and Herculaneum for students through choosing and evaluating the best evidence - from home! Gain access to multiple sources and teaching strategies.

Format: 2. Online

Audience: For Ancient History teachers of any level of experience.

Description

This course concentrates on part 2 of the Ancient History core: The nature of sources and evidence. Participants will be provided with a portfolio of copyright free sources to use in their classroom. The course will examine the wealth of sources available for all the aspects of life in Pompeii and Herculaneum listed in the syllabus. As well as providing strategies for investigating the types of sources available, we will also demonstrate a simple but effective scaffold for your students to use to analyse, evaluate and choose the best sources to use. This process can also be used when studying the other parts of the core.

Sessions

Module 1: Introduction to the nature of sources and evidence: the eruption and buildings

1 hour

This module introduces the nature of sources and evidence - what types there are and how we analyse and evaluate them. This introduction uses the context of the eruption of Mt Vesuvius. Participants will complete a small task based on this module which can be used in the classroom.

Module 2: The sources and evidence for the economy

2 hours

This module examines the available and the best sources and evidence for the economies of Pompeii and Herculaneum. Participants will complete a small task based on this session which can be used in the classroom.

Module 3: The sources and evidence for social structure and political life

2 hours

This module examines the available and the best sources and evidence for the social structure and political life of Pompeii and Herculaneum. Participants will complete a small task based on this session which can be used in the classroom.

Module 4: The sources and evidence for everyday life

2 hours

This module examines the available and the best sources and evidence for everyday life in Pompeii and Herculaneum.

Participants will complete a small task based on this session which can be used in the classroom.

Module 5: The sources and evidence for religion and the influence of Greek and Egyptian cultures

2 hours

This module examines the available and the best sources and evidence for religion and the influence of Greek and Egyptian cultures in Pompeii and Herculaneum. Participants will complete a small task based on this session which can be used in the classroom.

Module 6: Getting mileage from the sources and evidence

1 hour

In this module we will demonstrate ways to choose and re-use the best sources and evidence. This lessens the workload on the students and helps them learn about the evidence in depth. Public and private buildings will be the main examples but others will be used as well. There will be a small task to complete which can be used in the classroom.
